JAMES G. HATCHETT, P. M.

ELUQUENT ADDRESS OF COL. W. C. BRECKINRIDGE TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF THE KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE.

[The following is a corrected report of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge's Address "on behalf of the Kentucky Military Institute" on Commencement Day, June 8, 1871, several times alluded to in these columns, as one of the most brilliant, thoughtful, and suggestive that the annual commencements and examinations have elicited in any part of the country. In fact, we might go further and say that it was superior to any and all of them—a Southern classic—a sort of half human, all divine thing—that no man has the fortune to listen to more than two or three times in an ordinary lifetime. We were so fortunate as to be present and hear it spoken from the platform, and that, as every lover of true eloquence and its great triumphs knows, was a peculiar privilege. We have heard the famous and immortal Prentiss; and whether in delivery, or in substance, or in exhibiting the true chivalrous and poetic sentiment, we never heard anything from any one better than, if so good as, this:]

Young Gentlemen of the Military Institute:

If I rightly understand the nature of the duty I am called to perform it is in the name of this Institute and of its Faculty to utter the last words of warning and affection you will hear before the diplomas are given, the rewards of merit distributed, and the present session closed. Speaking for your Alma Mater, in the name of your instructors, whose faithful and laborious devotion has demonstrated their love, I charge you to remember that duty performed in love is the highest and noblest, as it is the most important and fruitful, manifestation of a nature created in the likeness of the Creator. This is the great lesson of life, and you cannot be reminded of it too often, nor bear it in mind too solemnly. Man, by the very act of his creation in the likeness of a personal God, is a distinct unit, each man to and in himself. We feel, each one of us, a personal freedom, intelligence, accountability, and above all, a personal and individual destiny. Alone each was born—alone will each die—alone will each be judged. Yet it is equally true that man is a social being, surrounded by those connected with him by every variety of tie. He is a son, a brother, a father, a friend, a servant, a master. He is a member of a household, of a family of several households. Widening the circle, he is a citizen of the State—one of a particular race; and still widening the view, he is a fellow-man to all the living—joint heir with them of "all the ages," and in part responsible for all the future; and over all, his Creator, that of all his race—is the Almighty to whom duties are owed. From the cradle to the grave, surrounded, each man finds his lot before him and leaves his work behind him. He cannot escape it if he would; there is no spot in the universe where he can be rid of obligation, and our sense of duty, which is the truest and most divine of all our natural impulses, and capable of bearing the richest fruit, is only the recognition of the obligation to be faithful to every being, and to every relation to sustain. The more varied the ties, the more numerous the obligations. As we rise in the rank we ourselves hold the more important the duties become.

The more abundant the gifts bestowed upon us, the richer our blessings, the wider our circle of influence, the greater our opportunities, the more pressing and heavy become the obligations we owe. The humblest peasant and the mightiest king alike are the subjects of this universal law; but how different in degree is the work assigned. The humblest individual who, on the sea-beach of England, learned of God from wind and wave and sky, and the noblest genius whose name is a privilege heretofore of that world and its future—where can conscience and of God; but how vast the difference in the answer they must make? And so of every rank from pauper to prince, of every class from idiot to genius. In our own peculiar place, under our own sky, surrounded by our own peculiar relations, gifted with our own peculiar talents, we have our own daily duties to perform, and as we are about to step over that narrow strip which divides college from active life, it affords a most fitting moment to pause, examine ourselves, and look calmly and bravely at these great obligations, and solemnly make up our minds to meet and perform them. In this solemn review the main facts as to each of you are the same. You live in the latter half of the 19th century; you are citizens of the American Republic, and of the southern half of it, you have received an education which enables you to prepare for any vocation in life; you are just ripening into manhood. It is then necessary for you to appreciate and participate in the spirit of the age in which you are called to act; to understand the history, necessities, and aspirations of the world of to-day, and in a more peculiar manner of the Republic in which you live, and of the State of which you are a citizen. These are high and noble studies, worthy of your most profound and thoughtful attention. Believe me, young gentlemen, you cannot find a more interesting subject of thought and meditation than that thus commended to you. The world of to-day—its wonderful achievements, its magnificent successes, its glorious heroisms, its tender and generous charities, its shameful lusts and bloody crimes, and infamous vices, and the American Republic as part of and involved in that world and its future—where can you find topics more full of interest and more important to you. The world is wiser, better, and happier to-day than it was on yesterday, and the sacrifice on Calvary was in vain, and the spirit of Christ has not, been with His church. Look abroad and see. Everywhere is our race excited in a degree altogether without precedent. In every land old things are passing away; the foundations of ages are torn up; the institutions of centuries are pulled down; the habits of generations are shaken off. The slumber of years is broken; and watchful, earnest, and heroic does the race struggle to deserve its divine destiny. We live in a heroic age. You jostle heroes in every crowd into which you press—heroes of the battlefield, nobler heroes of the unheralded dangers and victories of dutiful lives. I speak to-day in the hearing of men who have charged cannon and stood sentry over sleeping hosts. Buena Vista was just before you were born, and Sedan and Metz were only yesterday. Grecian valor has received a new glory in Crete, and the siege of Paris demonstrated that luxury does not destroy courage. Wherever the sun goes in its diurnal revolution, it looks upon a battlefield where the graves are fresh, and the grass green from new-shed blood. The heroes of war, numerous as they are, are not more numerous than the nobler heroes of peace. The ordinary life of to-day produces heroism. The papers of each day recount with unvarying monotony to readers accustomed to the recital of the acts of noblest devotion in every class of society. The military carries his life into his hands and goes to the uttermost parts of the earth, accompanied by the gentlest of wives. The doctor and the nurse breathe the air of pestilence; the pilot burns to death as he turns the wheel that guides the vessel freighted with hopes and joys and lives to shore; the engineer blows the whistle and reverses the engine, and looks calmly into the grave from which he is saving those entrusted to him, while the brakeman holds to his brake until he is taken to the skies; the miner holds the falling timbers of a caving tunnel on his back while his comrades escape, until his heart is crushed by the burden. Baker drinks at last from the Albert Nyanza, but not until he has given first to the wife who was with him. Livingstone is now lost in the wilds of Africa, and Hall is starting to the North Pole. Florence Nightingale has sisters in her neighborhood, and Ida Lewis is but a type of her day. The life-boat is always manned when a sinking vessel drifts toward breakers and death; the still voice of fearless duty in the heart being louder than howl of storm and roar of ocean. The nameless fireman of every town braves the fire for the stranger wrapped in its embrace. Death comes in no shape so terrible as to daunt the glorious courage of a heroic heart.

The very air is full of this glorious inspiration, and at the time of need there steps forth the man of to-day, who holds life ready to be given to duty. It is a generous age. Hospitals of every kind, asylums for the orphan, the widow, the lunatic, the idiot, the poor, dot every section. Churches, colleges and school-houses adorn every village. Charities are abundant and money flows freely for the improvement of the race, the alleviation of misery, the assuagement of sorrow. It is a daring age. No obstacles daunt, no terrors alarm, no difficulties retard. The lightning is taken from the skies, the ribs of the mountains are opened, the bowels of earth are invaded, the secrets of ocean, and air, and rock, and sky are wrested from their grasp. Mines are dug, valleys filled up, mountains leveled, rivers tunneled, and canals, and dams, and canals constructed. Time, space and distance annihilated. The telescope makes the dreams of Jean Paul simple prose to the sublime realities of the starry climes. The microscope has added new worlds to our conquests and knowledge. The barometer and thermometer foretell that soon the seas of storm, and cold, and rain, and snow will be ours. The trackless ocean has been mapped, and the highways of nations marked on its submissive bosom; while light-houses guard its Scylla and Charybdis, and steam laughs its claims to scorn.

You constantly hear it said that this is a material age. I do not know that I comprehend the sentence. Those who thus talk of materiality, romance, eloquence, sentiment, old-fashioned love, and kindred virtues, and gifts, belong to the past; that we live a realistic matter-of-fact, material age. If they mean that man has greatly extended his dominion over the material world—that is true. True, too, that false science is passing away—that truth is becoming more truly sovereign. The handiwork of God is nobler than the imaginations of man—the real is nobler than the ideal. The pure emotions of the human heart are tender and lovelier than the fancies of the poet. In no other sense is the charge true.

Does it make it a material age that in a comfortable car the hurrying lover whisks to the feet of his waiting fair one at the rate of forty miles an hour instead of riding with leggings and saddle-bags, through bottomless mud roads at four miles? That, in the wings of the wind, fly to the bed-side of a sick wife, receiving and sending messages of love and comfort with the aid of lightning, at every station? Does it detract from the noblest emotions that all mankind are brought face to face, and that the utterances of the wisest and the eloquent are to the world instead of to the neighborhood? The inventive faculty is akin to inspiration, and to-day the world is filled with the poetry of action and the eloquence of achievement. Do men fight the worse because of needle-guns, rifled cannon, and all the modern appliances of war? Let Shiloh, Sadown, and Sedan answer. Does Thackeray, Bismarck re-established the German Empire, and Rome became the Capital of united Italy; just after, Lesseppe opened the Suez canal to the "white-winged birds" of commerce and empire, and the cars ran from New York to San Francisco. Faraday and Huxley hobnob with D'Israeli and Spurgeon. Darwin gathers new proofs of his startling theory and the hardships of a voyage around the world. Peabody adorns the era of art and poetry. The Atlantic cable announces the death of Robert E. Lee. It is an age when new avenues of labor are opened. It holds out Briarean hands of entreaty and welcome to the earnest worker; yet it turns charged ears to the singer, an awakened, eager intellect to the thinker, and opens a tender, easily touched heart to him who pleads for charity and kindness. It is an age of union and co-operation. National and geographic laws are giving way before the unifying power of race and blood. Sectarian animosities and minor differences are buried before the grand march to closer union. Mighty—alas! dangerous—corporations control the great works of improvements. Organized parties control and divide nations. Partnerships are at the head of every profession and business. Co-operative energy, knowledge and gifts mark, if not cause, the wonderful progress of the age. I can not deny that to-day are the evils and crimes of the world of to-day. In the fertile field the enemy has sown tares amid the wheat, and the same genial sun and falling dew and ripening rain that gave to the wheat its golden and heavy grain have made the tares grow. The courage of the day fills the heart of him who seeks wealth as of him who seeks souls. The race for mastery is sternly and cruelly contested. Crime is unblinking and vice ostentatious. The evil is mixed with the good. The blinding extravagance of ill gotten wealth vies with the generous gifts from honest accumulations. The gambling hell is not far distant from the school, and the den of vice is but around the corner from the house of God. Thus it has ever been—thus it will ever be. The old faith is questioned—the sacred oracles are denied; the victim of Calvary is made a myth, and the future an enigma. This, too, in an old fight, ever renewed. It began in Paradise, and will end only upon the realization of the Apocalyptic vision.

Into this active, earnest, intense, aggressive, doubting world of conflict, you have to bear your part. Let me beg of you to remember it is your part you must play; not another's but your own. The world has no time to give you many opportunities. There never was but one Esther in all Israel—never a day but for one Esther, and she came to the kingdom for that very day, and we have the solemn statement that if she had not risen to the height of the duty assigned to her, she would have perished otherwise, and she would perish.

Take this lesson home. There never was before—there never will be again—a day for any one of you. Your day is now. Accept it and act your part; neglect it and disappear. These are the alternatives. Not only is there but one day, but only one place, for each of you. An army has but one chief, but it has generals, subordinate officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates; it has engineers, artillerymen, cavalry men, sappers, spies, and scouts. The sentry must place his lonely beat inspired by the same devotion to duty, the same zeal for the cause, the same self-abnegation as the commander-in-chief. It is not for fame the true soldier fights. He would fall in the petty skirmish of forgotten names with the same heroic devotion as in the glorious charge under the eye of a chieftain which decided the fate of the hour. The sublime sense of duty is the true basis of a character worthy of success. Fame, wealth, power, these may come, but they are not objects to be struggled for. They are as attendants, servicable and powerful; as masters, they are despotic and destroying. It is the great lesson of life to learn to do your duty, because it is your duty—simply, manfully doing not for reward, and not thinking of merit, but only because you ought to do it.

I will not here and now review with you the country and States of which you are citizens. I might trench in times like these upon themes not usual to such occasions. It is your duty to know your country and her institutions, laws, and the spirit of her people. Your education imposes important duties upon you. Your country needs brave, clear-headed, large-hearted sons. These open noble lives in this republic to those who can heal her wounds, restore her to power, repair her losses, and preserve to all citizens a true liberty, regulated by law. But I turn from this.

It has been eloquently said that, as a race, man is a dead race rather than a living race, that generation after generation follow each other to the dark shores of the eternal world as wave after wave break on the rock-ribbed shore. The pale nations of the sheeted dead surround the living. That life is but a lighted passway, across which shadows flit from darkness into darkness. Westward on the narrow line between the dead of the past and the dead of the future. But the dead of the past are immortal; the dead of the future will never perish. Our race is not a mighty ocean with recurring and ebbing waves. Our past is not darkness and our future, impenetrable night. We are glorious unities, but little lower than the angels, made in the likeness of the Lord God Almighty, and with an eternal future. These are verities. We can not change them. We must include them in any estimate we may make of our true duties. We can not fold our hands if we would. The battle is before us, and we must take part. We have choice as to our part, but that choice must be exercised or it is exercised for us. The current of time waits not for us—before its mighty sweep on barrier stands. The progress of the race is upward, and we can aid it. Its pathway has always been upward. The passions of man, kind, obscure their vision, follies, delayed, ignorance misled, vice retarded, obstacles obstructed, dangers terrified, but the zig-zag pathway yet pointed upward and onward to a higher civilization and a purer Christianity. In this pathway you must tread. Will you lead your race upward with a voice of cheering, a face of kindling love and faith, given to toil and hardship to thought, or will you be trampled under foot by the advancing hosts whose march you may assist, but can not prevent?

I speak to you, young gentlemen, with the earnestness of one who loves his State with passionate love; who loves and has faith in his race. I acknowledge and accept in love the unity and brotherhood of man. I look with eager, applauding eyes upon every true step forward, and mourn with sadness every retrograde movement. In the full day of Christian civilization I re-echo the old Roman's sublime utterance: "I am a man, and nothing human is foreign to me." And in this spirit I have spoken, believing it not improper to place before you, with a solemn seriousness, these high themes as the parting charge of this Institute and its Faculty. Carry, with the love of your teachers and the prayers of your friends, into the life you are entering, these thoughts. A life thus regulated will be an honor to her whose diploma you are about to receive, be full of usefulness to the world, and to you the well-founded claim to ineffable reward.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.—Hon. J. Q. Chenoweth, Senator from this District, will address his constituents at the following times and places:

Salvia, Friday, June 30th.
Lawrenceburg, Saturday, July 1st.
Frankfort, Monday, July 3d.
Speaking at 1½ o'clock P. M.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The case of the Commonwealth vs. William Newton consumed the time of the court until 10 o'clock, yesterday morning, when it was given to the jury, who rendered a verdict of "not guilty" at 5 o'clock, P. M. The case of Hawkins, indicted for the murder of Ben. Farmer in March, 1870, was next called and dismissed upon the grounds that he could not be convicted without additional testimony. This case was tried at the last criminal term of the Franklin circuit court, and the jury hung. A negro, Charles Watkins, alias "Rot-Gut," pleaded guilty to stealing seven dollars and fifty cents, from Sigmund Lusher, and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary.

J. B. Tarlton was adjudged a lunatic, and ordered to be sent to the Eastern Lunatic Asylum, Lexington.

The United States Clerk of the Weather, otherwise known as the Chief Signal Officer at Washington City, continues to forecast the weather for the benefit of everybody, and especially for all those who go down to the great deep in ships, with singular precision and success. During the extremely fickle and stormy weather of the past two weeks, he has hit the nail on the centre of the head every time. He receives hourly telegraphic reports of the range of the barometer and thermometer, from some 75 "observers" stationed at as many different points throughout the Union, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean; and from these he is able to make up those astonishingly accurate predictions, which can hardly be called guesses, since they are founded directly and invariably on the plain immutable laws of cause and effect.

CORRECTION.—In the roster of the royal family which appeared in our last number, the twenty-third relation enjoying the President's favor is given as "A. W. Casey, President's brother-in-law's own brother, Appraiser of Customs, New Orleans." It should be Jas. F. Casey, who is the own brother-in-law of Gen. Grant, they having married sisters. His brother, Peter Casey, omitted in the lists, is Postmaster at Vicksburg.

THE POTATO BUG, A DEADLY POISON.—Such at least is the report from an adjoining county, where, an old man and his wife, experimenting with some of them to see if hot water would kill them, threw them into boiling water, and were instantly killed by inhaling the fumes from the boiling bugs. The statement needs confirmation, but we give it as it comes to us for whatever it may be worth.

SOMETHING NEW.—We are pleased to be able to announce to our home readers, and to the public at large, that the Central Bank of Louisville, Ky., has just inaugurated a new feature in commercial enterprise in that city, to wit: the uniting of the two systems of banking and warehousing. In addition to the regular business of banking, the Central Bank Company propose to make cash advances on all consignments to them of agricultural and manufactured products, so soon as stored in their warehouse. J. C. Johnston is the president, and Julius Dorn cashier, of the Central Bank. The bank is at No. 73 Fifth street; the war house northeast corner of 14th and Walnut streets. Consignments by any of the railroads entering Louisville will be taken by the cars directly to the warehouse—there being tracks connecting with all of them which enter the warehouse.

The editor of the Cincinnati Gazette heads an editorial with the pleasing caption, "Shall we have cheap gas?" By going over to Covington last night and listening to G. N. Harlan he could have secured a large supply for nothing.

SIR KNIGHTS.—Jacob Swigert, J. Harlan Hatchitt, Dr. W. B. Phythian, F. V. Gray, P. U. Major, and a number of other Sir Knights from Frankfort Commandery, No. 4, will leave this afternoon to visit Du Molay Commandery, No. 12, of Louisville. It will doubtless be a pleasant visit.

Major Andrew J. Donnellson, formerly private secretary to President Jackson, Minister to Texas, and negotiator of the treaty by which that country was annexed to the United States, and candidate for Vice President with Fillmore in 1856, died suddenly at Memphis on Monday last.

NAZARETH.—The commencement exercises at Nazareth will be had to-day in the new hall on the grounds of the institution, near Bardstown. A special train from Louisville has been set apart by the superintendent of the Nashville Railroad for the accommodation of those who desire to attend the exercises.

Four handsome little sail-boats were gracefully walking the waters of the Kentucky river yesterday afternoon opposite the camp of the 4th U. S. Infantry. Adjutant Webster commanded the flag-ship.

RAILROAD DIRECTORS MEETING.—The directors of the Frankfort, Paris and Big Sandy Railroad will meet at the Farmers' Bank, in Georgetown, on Tuesday, July 4th, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Tax-payers will take notice that the tax-books of the city will be placed in the hands of the city marshal on July 10th, for the collection of taxes then due and unpaid, with an additional ten per cent. for collection. See advertisement.

We had a call yesterday from Hon. A. C. Vallandigham, of Simpson, and regret that our temporary absence prevented the pleasure of meeting.

Years ago the following little poem was found going the rounds without any author's name attached. It is deemed a "fugitive" of so much merit that we have been requested to start it on the rounds again with this inquiry, addressed to the whole literary guild: Who is the author?

CHANGED.

I cannot tell what change has come to you
Since when, amid the pine tree's murmurous stir,
You spoke to me of love most deep and true—
I only know you are not as you were.

It is not that you fail in tender speech;
You speak to me as kindly as of old,
But yet there is a depth I do not reach—
A doubt that makes my heart grow sick and cold.

True, there has been no anger and no strife;
I only feel with dreary discontent
That something bright has vanished from my life;
I know not what it was nor where it went.

You chide my grief and wipe my frequent tears;
But to my pain what art can minister?
Oh! I would give all life's remaining years
If I would be again as once you were.

As, dipped in fabled fountains far away,
All living things are hardened into stone,
So strange and frozen seems your love to-day,
Its sweet spontaneous growth and life are gone.

And it is changed into a marble ghost,
Driving away all happiness and rest,
In whose chill arms I shiver faint and lost,
Bruising my heart against its rocky breast.

Nay, no regrets; no vows; it is too late—
Too late for you to speak or me to hear.
We cannot mend torn roses—we must wait
For the new blossoms of another year.

We desire to acknowledge the receipt of a mess of the largest Irish potatoes we have seen this year, from the garden of our friend, Nelson Heffner, Esq. They are of the early rose variety.

The Sons of Temperance hold a grand basket meeting at Ashland Park, near Ashland, Ky., July 4th. Dr. J. J. Bradford, of Augusta, Hon. Laban T. Moore, of Catlettsburg, and W. C. Ireland, of Ashland, will deliver addresses.

DECLINED.—The Georgetown Times says Dr. Curry, of Richmond, Va., has declined the presidency of Georgetown College, recently tendered him.

ANNUAL STOCK SALE AT WOODLAWN.

We attended yesterday the annual stock sale of thoroughbred and trotting colts and fillies, and enjoyed a delightful day in meeting friends from all portions of the country and viewing fine stock. The crowd assembled was, if anything, larger than in former years, and was composed of leading stock men from a dozen States, as well as from all the counties in Kentucky where interest is taken in such matters. The press was largely represented, it having been our pleasure to meet, besides a number from Lexington, Louisville, and other points, Col. S. D. Bruce, of the Turf, Field, and Farm; Col. Farrar, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Rush, of the Chicago press, as also reporters for the Cincinnati papers. The sale was held in a beautiful grove and conducted by Capt. Phil. C. Kidd, of Lexington, who sustained his high reputation as an auctioneer, by his accuracy and dispatch. At noon there was the customary barbecue dinner, which was on a more liberal scale than ever before. Ten mutton, freshly barbecued and any quantity of genuine burgoo, all prepared under the superintendence of Capt. Perry Beard, formed the feast which was so abundant that, although there were full a thousand guests, there was abundance left. The sale closed by two o'clock, in ample time to enable the large crowd from Louisville, Frankfort, and other points along the line westward, to return on the afternoon train, which left Lexington at 1:40.

Fifty-six animals in all were sold, of which twenty-four were thoroughbred racing colts, twenty-two racing fillies, and ten of trotting stock. The total sales, as will be seen from the following detailed summary, amounted to $26,575—of which the colts brought $11,235; fillies, $12,055; and trotting stock, $3,285. The colts averaged $468; fillies, $547.21; and trotting stock, $328.50. General average, $474.

The following is the summary:

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything been so widely and so successfully used for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and known as the Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, it has risen higher and higher in its estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to the young, it is at the same time the most effective remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a preventive against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are inclined to cough and to cough, it should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the use of this medicine. It is a fact, and one which is well known to all who have used it, that the Ayer's Cherry Pectoral does not only cure the disease, but it also cures the cough, and the patient is able to breathe freely and comfortably.

Asterina is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of Dr. Ayer, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chills, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the various ailments which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is in no wise injurious to any patient. The most delicate and infirm can take it, and it is equally adapted to the most robust. It is a fact, and one which is well known to all who have used it, that the Ayer's Ague Cure does not only cure the disease, but it also cures the fever, and the patient is able to breathe freely and comfortably.
